

FIRST RADIO STATION PROPOSED FOR AREA MAY BE ERECTED IN BRISTOL TWP.; COST ESTIMATED AT $100,000

Main Stockholder is Mortimer Hendrickson, Formerly Associated With Stations KYW and WFIL — May Be Several Months Before Action is Taken on The Bristol Application.

The first radio station proposed for the Bristol area will probably be erected in Bristol Township, although in the application it is stated "site undetermined." The Federal Communications Commission confirmed Saturday that the Penn Jersey Broadcasting Company, Bristol, has filed application for a station in Bristol. The application was filed April 12 and was contingent upon a "change in facilities and location" by radio station WBUD at Morrisville. The FCC said the Penn Jersey application has not yet been acted upon, but added that permission has been granted WBUD to move to Trenton, N. J., and that this move is "now in process."

TOKYO, May 7 — (INS)—United Nations troops jumped off on the west and east flanks of the Korean front today in the first sizeable Allied ground attacks since the Chinese Reds launched their spring offensive two weeks ago.

The strong northward thrusts by tank-paced forces were unleashed as the Communists confronted Allied air mastery with a new challenge in the form of night flying twin-engine jets attacking UN light bombers.

A Monday night dispatch from U. S. Eighth Army field headquarters in Korea said Allied troops, supported by rolling artillery and air barrages, launched their attacks in the morning.

UN assault columns struck hard north of Seoul in the west sector while ROK (Republic of Korea) troops jumped off simultaneously at

BRISTOLIANS RETURN FROM TRIP TO EUROPE

Dr. and Mrs. G. A. Hussey, Jr., Visit Switzerland, Italy, France

AUDIENCE WITH POPE

Seven weeks trip through Switzerland, France and Italy has been concluded by Dr. and Mrs. George A. Hussey, Jr., of 503 Radcliffe street, who while enjoying the beauties of those European countries mingled with the people, in an effort to learn true conditions. The localities, who had sailed in March on the S. S. "Liberte," returned to the United States aboard the "Independence." Historic and scenic points in France were on the itinerary; they toured Italy, spent a week in Venice, and enjoyed trips to various islands off the Italian coast including Amalfi and Capri; also viewed Switzerland's lofty, snow-clad peaks.

A special audience was granted with Pope Pius XII, approximately 30 being in the party. Wages for specialists in Italy average about $2 per day, the travelers report, this being very low in comparison with prices. In that country they

REDS ON COLLEGE STAFFS?

A quick look at the Pennsylvania budget indicates that the State government (which means the taxpayers) put up something like $33,000,000 last biennium for higher education, and are about to raise $46,000,000 for the same purpose the next two years.

The lion's share goes to four big universities — Penn State, University of Pennsylvania, Pittsburgh and Temple. When the question of "academic freedom" comes up, it is important to remember that these and similar institutions are not privately owned, not self-supporting, and certainly not the exclusive property of their officials and staffs — but that they are supported by the public, should be responsible to the public, and owe a duty to work for the public's interests — including help in the suppression of subversive activities.

It comes as a shock to find that the major institutions of higher learning in this state, after the zeal with which they have courted appropriations produced by the national and state systems of government, have sent representatives to Harrisburg to protest against laws which would help prevent instructors from using their public positions to teach or work for the undermining and overthrow, by violence, of our government.

The question immediately comes up, what is going on in these colleges and universities? What are the instructors telling the students in the classrooms, which a loyalty oath would interfere with? What subversive organizations do some of the professors belong to, which they would be embarrassed to have revealed as a result of the proposed pledges?

This brings one to the further question of whether the time is not overdue for a full-dress investigation of the status of higher education in this state, with special refer-

Verdict Returned Favors Bristol Township Resident

DOYLESTOWN, May 7—Concluding a two-day trial in Civil Court, here, a jury Friday which deliberated about 30 minutes, returned a verdict in favor of the defendant, Frank Hasty, Belmont and Bowman avenues, Bristol twp., who was being sued for $121.63.

Judge Edward G. Blester presided at the trial, which got underway Thursday, and the plaintiff was Lee Tire and Rubber Company of New York, Inc., Norristown Branch.

The defendant's defense was that the tires, which amounted to $221.63 and were sold June 2, 1950, were sold to his brother and not to him. A $100 down payment was made leaving the balance as the basis of the suit.

There was also some testimony by office manager, B. D. Righter, about the Norristown Branch not having the right to sell tires in the Bristol area.

Suffers Eye Injury When Gasoline Tank Explodes

Particles of steel and rust entered the eyes of James Melvin, and pieces of steel became imbedded in his forehead when a gasoline tank exploded on a car which Melvin was "junking" on Saturday afternoon.

Melvin, who resides on Wilson avenue, was taken to Harriman Hospital, then to Wills Eye Hospital, Philadelphia. At the latter institution particles of steel and rust were removed from both eyes as soon as he was admitted, and additional particles were removed yesterday. Officials at the hospital have informed Melvin that his right eye is alright, but there is possibility of an operation being necessary on the left eye.

Melvin was removing a gasoline tank from an old car, as an assistant was working with a torch on another part of the car. It is believed that a spark from the torch ignited gasoline remaining in the tank.

WHAT MEN DISLIKE

An informal poll of males in show business has produced a list of what they think is funny in women's dress. Although the survey has the unmistakable aroma of a publicity gag, it is a refreshing contrast to the interminable 10-best-dressed lists.

The male view of what a well-dressed woman should not do or wear includes big hats, crooked stocking seams, low-heeled shoes, gloves at cocktail parties, low-cut dresses on informal occasions, strange colors in fingernails, and untidy hair.

None of this, probably, will be news to married women, for every wife has endured domestic nagging about one or more of these items, especially the big hat. Like all such lists and such generalizing, there are flaws in this one. Big hats are becoming to some women, also low-heeled shoes. Colored fingernails and gloves at cocktail parties. All would be well if only those wore these things to whom they are becoming.

What the survey tends to prove is that if women dress to please men, many of them aren't succeeding. If they consulted male taste alone there would be no big hats and no colored fingernails and also mighty sparing use of lipstick.

Of the men polled in the survey, Marion Brandon's comment was least subject to dispute. He didn't care, he said, what a girl had on if she had a pleasant personality. "If she doesn't, clothes won't help that either," added Mr. Brandon. It is a point to be kept in mind by those who may be concerned.

HERE IT COMES

When a news item announces the date on which the northeast route to Yellowstone Park will be cleared of snowdrifts and opened to tourists, summer, for all practical purposes, is here. The road will be open by June 10, it is confidently predicted.

The northeast entrance, in addition to being a sort of barometer of the seasons, is a road to remember. Completed 15 years ago, it winds up and down mountain peaks for 65 miles, first in Montana, then in Wyoming, and vice versa half a dozen times. Snow squalls are occasionally encountered at the 10,500-foot-elevation top in July and August. The road is excellent, and it is a recommended drive on which to cool off.

Just outside the boundaries of the park on this road, at an altitude of 7,000 feet, is the old gold camp of Cooke City, Mont. Not a ghost town by any means — there is a sizable gold mine operating there — Cooke City is reminiscent of the days of the old West.

Well, as we said, when it's only four weeks until the Red Lodge-Cooke City highway is opened to tourists, summer has arrived — and dreams of vacations cannot be far behind.

The mains filled immediately when the water was turned into them, and the force of the stream at each point along the line was considered very satisfactory. A sufficient number of people crowded into the car to fill it, and the honor of having "the first ride," seemed to gratify the free passengers. R. B. Bristol is experiencing the distressing discomforts of a coal famine. At the present time, with the mercury falling far below the freezing point, not a coal dealer in the borough has a pound of coal to supply clamoring and distressed would-be customers. It is fair to presume that nine-tenths of the coal bins in town are empty with very little prospect of replenishment.

A regular procession of people have been travelling to a Bath street dealer's office in the search for coal. They have been coming with baskets, buckets and bags, carts and rack wagons—all clamoring for coal. Last week, word having been received that a Langhorne dealer, whose yard is on the line of the Reading road, had coal, there was a stampede of Bristol people to his place, and the telephone wires were kept hot by people making inquiries. On Monday, at one time forty teams were at the lucky coal yards, and several carloads of coal were cleaned out in short order. Teams even from Burlington came over on the ferry and proceeded to Langhorne in the mad quest for coal. A number of Bristol people got coal at the Langhorne yards. Farmers and their rack wagons were pressed into service to convey the precious lumps to Bristol. On an average, $7.50 a gross ton was paid for the anthracite at the yards, and the teamsters charged $4 a load of two tons to haul it the seven miles into Bristol.

Need Areas For Recreation Purposes

retain the loyalty of the young people growing up in their midst." The subject is in line for thorough examination in the near future.
An extensive report calling for a reappraisal of public recreational facilities in Pennsylvania has been submitted to Gov. John S. Fine.

The document was prepared by a committee appointed last year headed by Wallace Richards, a Pittsburgh executive. The group worked in cooperation with the State Planning Board.

Professional recreation leaders, meanwhile, will conduct their own examination of the problem in a conference at Pennsylvania State College Wednesday through Friday. Planning Board records reveal that only 733 of the State's 2560 local units have community-sponsored recreation programs in progress. Of these, 519 are of less than 6,000 population.

State recreation planning consultant Kenneth W. Abell said this will be the key topic of discussion at the conference which will be sponsored by the Pennsylvania Recreation Society and the Penn State Extension Service. The Commonwealth's per capita outlay for recreation is only 53¢, cents, said Abell, compared with the national recommendation of three dollars.

The responsibility, he said, lies at the local level. The State's function is advisory for the most part although financial aid is available for payment of recreational leaders. Public recreation, in the broad sense, covers such fields as competitive sports, camping, indoor and outdoor community events or instruction in drama, music and the arts and crafts.

"A community adequately programming these activities holds the loyalty of its people," Abell said, "and encourages the growth of industry through assuring a high level of public morale."

But organization is necessary, he pointed out, to create leisure-hour opportunities tailored to a local scene.

"A commission or board can be set up in every community," he said, "and it won't cost the people a cent."

This local unit could examine the area's needs and opportunities, he said, and recommend action to the public.

"The program's cost then will depend upon what the people want," said Abell.

The 1949 School Code, he noted, enables third class cities, counties, townships, boroughs and school districts to appropriate money to pay expenses incurred in the operation of public recreation facilities and activities.

A special tax not to exceed two mills on each dollar of taxable property may be levied, he said.

with no limit applying to boroughs. The Commonwealth at the same time offers aid in paying recreation leaders via the standard reimbursement procedure applicable to school districts.

found food and clothing extremely expensive. "There is a great amount of re-building, both in Italy and France, with the aid of the Marshall plan" the localities state. Re-building is especially noticed in the area of the Bay of Naples, where so many hotels were completely demolished during the war. "Many are still home-less in Italy, however, with countless people living in ruins," it is stated. The Hussey family reports that so many in Italy are barely existing on a diet of cheap wine and bread.

Travelers find food excellent in the three countries visited, although for residents of both Italy and France the food situation is reported as "poor".

Dr. and Mrs. Hussey visited Mrs. Hussey's aunt, Mrs. Bertha Schless Trummer at Rorschach, Switzerland. Mrs. Trummer residing in her ancestral home, which originally belonged to Mrs. Hussey's great, great, great grandfather. The dwelling was formerly a convent.

THE WAR

the extreme east wing of the 110-mile front.

The exact areas of the twin attacks were not pinpointed in the censored initial field dispatch telling of the new development. However, earlier advices from the front said a UN tank-infantry patrol knifed back across Parallel 38 in east-central Korea Monday morning.

The Monday night message from Eighth Army headquarters said the Allied attacks in the west and east sectors were described as "probing in force" rather than a major counter-offensive.

But they were the first UN ground blows "in force" since the Reds launched their "first round" offensive which was halted after more than 80,000 casualties were inflicted on the enemy.

The Eighth Army's Monday night communique said heavy Red resistance to Allied patrol thrusts continued during the day on the road to Munsan northwest of Seoul.

Presumably, the Allied attack on the western front was proceeding up routes leading north or northeast from the South Korean capital. Several times in the past few days, American tank-infantry teams had stabbed through the gateway hub of Uijongbu, 11 miles due north of Seoul.

On the mountainous central front, the Eighth Army bulletin related, an armor-led Allied patrol re-entered the pivotal fortress hub of Chuncheon, eight miles south of Parallel 38. This vital center had been lost to the Reds during their recent southward push.
